New private liquor stores coming to Saskatchewan

More options for consumers. SLGA will continue to dictate minimum prices for all liquor stores in province: Minister

ALYSSA MCDONALD
Metro in Regina

Full-line private liquor stores are coming to Saskatchewan, opening the province's doors to a new era of competitive pricing and a larger variety of wines, spirits and beers.

The four stores — two in Regina and two in Saskatoon — will be constructed and operated mostly by supermarket chains in newer or underserviced areas in the growing cities, and will be treated as private retailers by the Saskatchewan Liquor and Gaming Authority.

"These will be standalone stores. They will not be an add-on to the grocery store," Donna Harpauer, minister responsible for SLGA, said on Tuesday.

She added that the Crown agency will continue to dictate minimum prices for all liquor stores in the province.

The private outlets will be offered a 16 per cent discount on SLGA products, but will also be able to direct-source their merchandise.

"SLGA is our partner, but at the end of the day we have to have an offer in the marketplace that makes sense for customers to come and choose us," said Jeff Hodgson, director of merchandising for Sobeys, which will build and run two of the liquor stores — one in Regina and one in Saskatoon.

"We have access to everything we carry in Alberta, and Alberta has probably the largest database of products in the country."

Unlike SLGA's stores, the private ventures will be allowed to remain open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. if they want to.

Harpauer said SLGA will keep its 79 public liquor stores, though all other such operations in Saskatchewan will be private from this point forward.

Locations

All four stores will be approximately 10,000-square-foot, standalone operations.

- Co-op: Located in Blairmore, to be completed early 2014
- Sobeys: Located in Stonebridge, to be completed summer 2014

Budget books misleading, incomplete: Sask. auditor

Special report. Auditor says better accounting would have shown nine deficits in last decade

Saskatchewan's auditor says the government is presenting a blurry picture of its finances, though the finance minister disagrees.

The province reports its finances on a general revenue fund basis and a summary basis.

Auditor Bonnie Lysyk notes the general revenue fund does not include Crown corporations and other agencies controlled by the government. Those are only included in the summary totals.

She said in a special report that people get confused when the province releases what she called two sets of books. Plus, the government can present what appears to be a balanced budget simply by shifting money around.

"By allowing all of that extra information in there, it's not clear to people," said Lysyk. "I think it isn't appropriate to have two sets of numbers that you can pick depending on what message you want to send."

Legislation in Saskatchewan has not been updated to require a provincial budget based on 100 per cent of the province's revenues and expenses like other provinces in Canada.

The auditor said that if Saskatchewan had used Generally Accepted Accounting Principles, it would have presented deficit budgets in nine of the last 10 years.

"On this situation we respectfully disagree with the auditor," said Finance Minister Ken Krawetz.

"Every province is different. We think that our method continues to deliver transparent information," he added. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Officials say hospital designed by kids, for kids

The exterior design of the new Children's Hospital. SUPPLIED/SHR

The Children's Hospital of Saskatchewan is one step closer to becoming a reality.

The final design for the Children's Hospital of Saskatchewan was approved by the province on Tuesday.

Using suggestions from children and families across Saskatchewan, the new hospital was designed to be a home away from home.

"It's been something on the mind of a lot of people," said health minister Dustin Duncan. "We know that ... when we look across Canada, Saskatchewan was one of only two provinces without a dedicated children's hospital."

The new hospital, which will be located adjacent to Royal University Hospital on the University of Saskatchewan campus, will provide patients with a number of benefits.

These include a streamlined process for new mothers in maternal care, larger and more private rooms for patients and support for families traveling from outside of Saskatoon.

Jackie Mann, vice-president of integrated health services with the Saskatoon Health Region, said a lot of work and consultation went into the finalized design, including four week-long design events involving 200 people — not to mention "hundreds and hundreds of hours of discussion, consensus (and) arguments."

Construction of the $230-million project is expected to get underway in early 2014, with completion scheduled for 2016. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Flooding

First Nation, five municipalities in state of emergency

Five Saskatchewan municipalities and one First Nation are under states of emergency because of rising floodwater.

Emergencies have been declared in the towns of Maidstone and Radisson, the village of Borden, the rural municipalities of Great Bend and Elfros as well as the Poundmaker First Nation.

Elfros is in east-central Saskatchewan, while all the other communities are located northwest of Saskatoon.

Social Services said just over 50 people have been moved out of the Poundmaker First Nation and are being put up in hotels in surrounding communities.

The water is just beginning to flow in many areas, because the melt has been delayed by colder-than-normal temperatures and was topped up today by more snow.

Patrick Boyle with the Water Security Agency says snow is better than rain because rain brings faster, higher peaks.

The agency has said the entire southern half of Saskatchewan will see water run-off levels above or well above normal. Run-off is expected to be very high and flooding is likely to occur from Moose Jaw to Indian Head, including Regina, and south past Weyburn to near the U.S. border. Saskatoon, Prince Albert and North Battleford are in the red zone as well. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Officials said the crew of a charter flight carrying 159 people from Egypt to the Russian city of Kazan saw war activities on the ground that endangered the plane. The aircraft landed in Kazan safely.

Auditor accuses feds of First Nations fiasco

Indictment. Bid to improve lives of aboriginals wrecked by infighting, lack of planning: Ferguson

At a time when aboriginal communities are crying out for better treatment from the federal government, auditor-general Michael Ferguson says two key pillars meant to improve lives have gone awry because top federal officials and important departments can't get their acts together. STEVE RUSSELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

The federal auditor general says two of the government's key pillars meant to improve the lives of aboriginal peoples have gone awry.

The reason: Infighting, poor co-ordination and lack of planning.

Auditor General Michael Ferguson says attempts to deal with the fallout of the residential school system are a mess as the Truth and Reconciliation Commission bickers with the federal government over what historical documents need to be provided.

And he says Ottawa's plans to deal with rising rates of diabetes — especially on First Nations reserves — are showing no results.

Government programs aren't working together or checking the effectiveness of their projects, he says.

At stake is the mental and physical health of First Nations families across Canada at a time when aboriginal communities are crying out for better treatment from the federal government.

Time is running out for the Truth and Reconciliation Commission to fulfil its mandate of creating a historical record of residential schooling — known for its emotional, physical and sexual abuse of children.

It has until July 2014 to put together a complete record, but Ferguson says work has barely begun because government departments and the commission have not been able to agree.

"We are concerned that the lack of co-operation, delays and looming deadline stand in the way of creating the historical record of Indian residential schools," he said.

Elsewhere in his report, Ferguson chided the Canada Revenue Agency for not working hard enough to chase people who owe taxes.

He said Ottawa needs to do more to collect from people who cheat the employment insurance system.

And there has been no proper accounting for billions in security spending since the 9/11 attacks.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lost and found

$3.1B

Ferguson says he has been unable to track as much as $3.1 billion in funding set aside to combat terrorism. The paper trail tracked only $9.8 billion of the $12.9 billion that was spent between 2001 and 2009 on myriad anti-terrorism programs. His report says the Conservative government must do a better job of reporting how taxpayer money is spent.

Mo' money, mo' problems

$300M

Ottawa is overpaying employment insurance by at least $300 million a year and fails to get millions of it back, the auditor general says. "Service Canada has an obligation to find and stop inappropriate claims," says Alyson Queen, a spokesperson for Human Resources Minister Diane Finley.

Oldie not goodie

Aged 50

Canada's search-and-rescue system is in distress and some elements are near the breaking point, Ferguson said. The cost of the air force's fleet of nearly 50-year-old C-115 Buffaloes and older model C-130 Hercules — rescue workhorses — has climbed to $20 million a year.

Double killing. Mounties wasted time, money with a botched sting: Lawyer

A lawyer for a teenager on trial for two murders says Mounties wasted time and money targeting the youth in a poorly planned sting when they should have been looking for the real killer.

Mona Duckett argued in court Tuesday that the confession the youth made to undercover officers — who he believed were part of a criminal gang — should not be used as evidence.

Barry Boenke, 68, and his friend Susan Trudel, 50, were found bludgeoned and shot to death on a rural property east of Edmonton in June 2009.

Duckett said RCMP made a quick arrest and, when the case fell apart against the teen and a co-accused two years later, officers forged ahead with an undercover charade that took advantage of the accused's vulnerabilities.

Duckett said it's a shame the grieving families of the victims still have no answers.

The youth cannot be named for legal reasons.

Nearly 40 years ago, Robin Herman paved the way for female sports reporters when she became the first woman to enter an NHL dressing room.

And of all dressing rooms — it was the one coached by Don Cherry.

Yup, the same guy who caused a fuss on Hockey Night In Canada on Saturday when he said female reporters shouldn't be in an NHL dressing room.

In a "Dear Don" letter written by Herman to Cherry and published Tuesday by ESPNW.com, she reminded the controversial Coach's Corner star that he was her "hero" for letting her into the "Big Bad Bruins" dressing room "back in the day."

"Don't you remember — I guess you don't." said Herman, who was just 23 at the time.

FDA to investigate added-caffeine foods

Marketing craze. Wave of jacked-up products, such as caffeinated gum, prompts safety concerns

Looking for a new way to get that jolt of caffeine energy? Food companies are betting snacks like potato chips, jelly beans and gum with a caffeinated kick could be the answer.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is closely watching the marketing of these foods and wants to know more about their safety. The FDA said Monday it will look at the foods' effects on children in response to a caffeinated gum introduced this week by Wrigley. Alert Energy Caffeine Gum promises "the right energy, right now."

The agency is already investigating the safety of energy drinks and energy shots, prompted by consumer reports of illness and death.

Michael Taylor, FDA's deputy commissioner of foods, said Monday that the only time FDA explicitly approved the added use of caffeine in a food or drink was in the 1950s for colas. The current proliferation of caffeine added to foods is "beyond anything FDA envisioned," he said.

"It is disturbing," Taylor said in an interview with The Associated Press. "We're concerned about whether they have been adequately evaluated."

Taylor said the agency will look at the potential impact these "new and easy sources" of caffeine will have on children's health and will take action if necessary. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pirate Party captures three seats in Iceland

Iceland has been stormed by pirates. They won't be forming the government, but online freedom advocates the Pirate Party were still big winners in the country's election.

The party, just a few months old, took 5.1 per cent of the vote in Saturday's poll, gaining three of the 63 seats in Iceland's parliament, the Althingi.

It is the biggest electoral trophy yet for a movement founded seven years ago in Sweden by a group of rebellious file-sharing geeks and hackers who scoffed at copyright laws.

Birgitta Jonsdottir, the most senior of Iceland's three victorious Pirate lawmakers, argues that political and legal structures around the world have not kept pace with the technological change that has transformed the way we live. She compares it to new software that can't run on an old computer.

The Pirate Party was founded in Sweden in 2006, its name a taunt to the anti-piracy activities of copyright-holders, its logo a buccaneering black flag. It has spread to countries including the United States, but has had its greatest electoral success in northern Europe.

WHY LET REPORTERS IN AT ALL?

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

Q: What's a First World problem?
A: A First World problem is so trivial and ridiculous that it fails to resonate with people who have real problems, such as making it to the end of the day … and then going to bed hungry.

Female reporters in male pro-sport dressing rooms? First World problem. That it is generating any comment at all is testament to Don Cherry's remarkable ability to stoke controversy at an age when most people have already gone to bed.

You gotta hand it to Hockey Night in Canada's perpetual pundit. He rushes in where nobody else bothers to tread.

First, Duncan Keith of the Chicago Blackhawks is rude to a female reporter who needles him in his own dressing room in the wake of losing a fierce contest to the Vancouver Canucks. Then Cherry wades in and says women should not be allowed into male dressing rooms.

This is followed by everyone gleefully piling onto the old guy and getting politically correct points for being oh so progressive.

Cherry loves it because he's still got it at 79, the CBC loves it because the controversy draws viewers to its only remaining hit show and all the male sportscasters love it because, compared to Don Cherry, they're enlightened. That's not saying much: Compared to Don Cherry, Klingons are enlightened.

Before I go any further, let me say unequivocally that if (and it's a big if) reporters are allowed into pro-sport dressing rooms while the players are still dressing, all reporters regardless of gender should be admitted.

Indeed, if there are male reporters who feel the need to interview female sports stars in their underwear, it should be allowed, although those reporters should be willing to pass a background check and psychological exam prior to gaining entry.

But this First World controversy completely misses the point. The point is simple: Reporters don't belong in dressing rooms any more than curmudgeons or Klingons.

It's common human courtesy and should apply across the board, including young multi-millionaires who have just lost to the Vancouver Canucks.

Think about it. You're Duncan Keith. You've barely had a chance to shower and get over losing to an arch-rival and here's some reporter in your face daring you to admit you slashed Daniel Sedin and got away with it.

The gender of the reporter is hardly the point. The point is: Why is that reporter here in the first place?

Even if he does earn $8 million (!) a year, Duncan Keith doesn't make enough to be required to answer provocative, hostile questions in his own dressing room. How would you like it if a reporter turned up in your bathroom and started asking you about that slash on Daniel Sedin?

Exactly. It's a First World travesty. Even if it takes an overdressed geezer with the mind of a 12-year-old Klingon to point it out.

Ben Kingsley

Actor more gangster than Gandhi

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

For someone who became famous playing Gandhi, one of the 20th century's great pacifists, Ben Kingsley has certainly played his share of villains.

His latest character, The Mandarin in Iron Man 3, is one of the great comic book baddies. He's Iron Man's oldest foe, a scientific genius and an unbeatable martial artist, who draws his power from 10 finger rings he created using alien technology.

How bad is this guy? This bad: "Some people call me a terrorist. I consider myself a teacher," he says. "Lesson number one: Heroes — there is no such thing."

The filmmakers say Mandarin is partially based on Colonel Kurtz from Apocalypse Now and another character Kingsley made famous.

In Sexy Beast, Kingsley played Don Logan, a vile English gangster who intimidates an old colleague into coming out of retirement for one last job. How bad is this guy? This bad: He starts a brawl on an airplane because he was asked to stub out a cigarette.

"I do know that Shane Black, our writer-director, loved Sexy Beast," said Kingsley, "and was very influenced in his choice of me playing The Mandarin."

Logan isn't the only villain Kingsley has brought to life on the big screen, however.

In BloodRayne, the Oscar winner plays king of the vampires Kagan, a vicious character who must quell a rebellion led by his daughter. When asked why he would appear in a movie that ranked in Rotten Tomatoes' list of the 100 worst reviewed films of the 2000s, he said, "I have always wanted to play a vampire, with the teeth and the long black cape. Let's say that my motives were somewhat immature for doing it."

As The Hood in Thunderbirds, Kingsley uses his mental powers — telekinesis and hypnosis — to take over the International Rescue headquarters. He took the role in the big screen treatment of the 1960s British children's marionette show at the urging of his kids. "My son has a Thunderbirds alarm clock. That's how big a fan he is of the TV series."

Ben Kingsley in Iron Man 3. HANDOUT

He's also played villains in War Inc, Prince of Persia and Oliver Twist and says, "as an actor, I have to push the word 'villain' right to the back of my mind and bring forward their distorted sense of righteousness and destiny. Because I think classic villains like The Mandarin have to have a profound sense of right."

Rumer has it, Demi reconciling with Willis

Following months of apparent estrangement, Demi Moore and daughter Rumer Willis seem to be reconnecting, and all it took was some yoga.

The pair was spotted, along with a few friends, attending a yoga class in West Hollywood together this past weekend, according to Us Weekly.

"They all did the class together, and after the 90 minutes they walked out as a group," a source says.

"Demi and Rumer seemed very close, like they had been in the past. There didn't seem to be any tension or hard feelings between them."

Things have reportedly been tense between Demi and her daughters — including Rumer's sisters, Scout and Tallulah — since her split from Ashton Kutcher in late 2011 and hospitalization and rehab stay in the early part of 2012.

In June's Cosmopolitan, Sofia Vergara chats about plans for possibly starting a family with fiancé Nick Loeb.

Rumours have been swirling that the Modern Family actress and Loeb are hiring a surrogate.

But Vergara says that rumour stems from the fact she froze her eggs.

"I had to go to my doctor's office a hundred million times to do injections. The (rumour) probably came from that," the 40-year-old says. "My doctor had told me, 'We have a small window.' I said, 'That's so rude!' I already have a kid, so I never thought I would need to do that. But I will have to use a surrogate, because I had thyroid cancer and lots of radiation. I don't want to wait forever, but not yet, because I'm working like an animal."

Matthew Perry denies being source of Friends reunion rumour

Matthew Perry wants to make it clear he was not behind the latest rumour of a Friends reunion, despite getting Jennifer Aniston jokingly naming him as the prime suspect.

"I was the first one to nix it," Perry insists to E! News.

But that doesn't mean he thinks a reunion is a bad idea — it's just not the right time yet.

"I think what we do is a show called 'Old Friends,' and it's on a park bench and when we're in our 80s," he offers.

A trip to see, a riverboat fantasy

Cruising. Tired of the big box cruise ships? Try something a bit more adventurous — a trip down the Danube

DOROTHY ROBINSON
Metro World News in New York

A quaint cruise down the Danube will allow you to see a whole new side of Europe. JEFFOWENPHOTOS/FLICKR

Ocean cruising has its perks. Tropical destinations, all-you-can-eat buffets, water slides, bowling, free booze — it's a $30 billion business meant to cater to every whim. But sometimes the excessiveness of ocean cruising can overwhelm. What if you want to experience the joys of travelling by sea without thousands of people crammed alongside you; without paying extra for excursions, or having to adhere to a rigid schedule while visiting increasingly homogenized ports of call?

Riverboat cruising plucks the aspects that make ocean cruising so attractive — the ability to hit multiple destinations without unpacking, the collegial atmosphere on board, an international, knowledgeable staff, a cosmopolitan experience — while being more refined and smaller than their big-white-boat counterparts. As the name implies, riverboat cruising uses smaller vessels that stick mainly to rivers, mostly in Europe but also in Asia and the South Pacific, the Mediterranean and Northern Africa, and even Antarctica.

"Most of our guests are seasoned world travellers for whom the destination is still the main attraction. For them, it's not about all-night buffets or skating rinks or other novelties you find aboard big cruise ships — it's about the discovery," says Kevin Wallace, COO of Vantage Deluxe World Travel, a premiere riverboat cruising company based in Boston. "You unpack once, then sail right into the heart of ports great and small, where sightseeing and intercultural activities are always included."

With riverboat cruising, you sacrifice water slides for accessibility and a more unique experience. Smaller boats mean you can slip into smaller ports of call — you usually just walk off the boat and into the centre of town.

But riverboat companies aren't dumb, nor are they stuffy.

They include the perks North Americans know and love: full-service cocktail lounges with live entertainment, Internet cafés, excursions, and, yes, even all-you-can-eat breakfast and lunch buffets (as well as a formal sit-down dinner every night).

Wallace is celebrating the launch of the company's latest addition to their fleet, River Splendor. The new ship, part of a $120 million investment by Vantage, has a busy year ahead: After its March christening in Antwerp, Belgium, it will spend the spring, summer and fall cruising the Rhine, Main and Danube rivers between Amsterdam and the Black Sea as the lead ship on Vantage's most popular package, the Majestic Rivers of Europe: Castles, Cathedrals and Fairytales (with stops in Vienna, Budapest and the Czech Republic), as well as the Gateway to the Black Sea trip that takes travellers from Budapest along the Danube all the way to the Black Sea resort of Constanta, Romania.

So, with these trips, instead of onboard bowling you'll just have to enjoy a home-hosted lunch with a family in Croatia instead. In lieu of a Broadway musical at night, you'll have to settle for an exclusive classical concert at the Kursalon in Vienna.

Sounds like a pretty good trade-off, no?

Classic Niçoise makes great appetizer or main with the addition of rotini

ROSE REISMAN
for more, visit rosereisman.com or follow her on twitter @rosereisman

This is a fantastic main course for lunch or dinner.

The healthy omega 3 fatty acids come from the tuna and help to lower the bad cholesterol and triglycerides.

Be sure, however, to only buy tuna packed in water, not oil, to save the excess calories and fat.

Ingredients

- 12 oz rotini
- 6 oz green beans, cut in pieces
- 1 3/4 cups chopped tomatoes
- 3/4 cup diced cucumbers
- 3/4 cup diced sweet red or green peppers
- 1/2 cup sliced red onions
- 1 can (6.5 oz or 185 g) flaked tuna packed in water, drained
- 1/3 cup sliced olives
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh dill or 125 ml 1 tbsp (15 mL) dried
- 5 anchovies, minced

Dressing

- 1/3 cup olive oil
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
- 2 tbsp water
- 2 tsp crushed garlic
- Cucumber shavings

1. Cook pasta in boiling water according to package instructions or until firm to the bite. Rinse with cold water. Drain and place in serving bowl.

2. Blanch green beans in boiling water just until still crisp, approximately 2 minutes. Drain, rinse with cold water and add to pasta. Add tomatoes, cucumbers, sweet peppers, onions, tuna, olives, dill and anchovies.

3. Make the dressing: In small bowl combine oil, lemon juice, vinegar, water and garlic. Pour over pasta, and toss. Garnish with cucumber shavings. (For cucumber garnish, use a vegetable peeler down the length of the cucumber to create thin shavings).

Is your grill all ready for your culinary imagination?

Try planking today with this easy Tahini-Sesame Salmon. NEWS CANADA

One of the unique and delicious methods to grill food uses a wooden plank.

The smoke created from the plank sitting directly above a lit burner infuses the meat with a delicate smoky flavour.

Using a plank is simple:

- Soak it in water for at least an hour and pat it dry.
- Pre-heat your grill on high for 10 minutes.
- Coat both sides of the plank with olive oil then place the seasoned meat on it.
- Place the plank on the grill directly over the lit burner and reduce the heat to medium/low.
- Cook the meat to its desired doneness.

Grilling planks are specifically designed for the barbecue and there's a variety of flavours to choose. Cedar planks are ideal for salmon.

Tahini-Sesame Salmon

1. Coat salmon with light dusting of salt and black pepper.

2. Mix the tahini, honey and soy sauce. Add white wine as necessary if the mixture is too thick. It should be creamy, but still light enough to drizzle and baste.

3. Coat the fillets with the glaze and arrange them on the planks and place planks on the grill.

4. Close the lid and cook for 15 to 20 minutes. Salmon is cooked when it is opaque in colour and flakey to the touch of a fork. NEWS CANADA/BROILKING-BBQ.COM

Ingredients

- 1/4 cup tahini (sesame butter)
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- White wine (for consistency)
- 4 salmon fillets

Lunch. Egg Salad and Smoked Salmon Sandwich

1. In a medium bowl, whisk together the mayonnaise, mustard, smoked paprika and hot sauce. Stir in the cornichons and celery. Gently stir in the chopped hard-boiled eggs, then season with salt and pepper. Cover and refrigerate at least 30 minutes, or up to overnight.

2. When ready to serve, lightly toast the slices of sourdough bread. While the bread is still warm, spread a quarter of the egg salad over each slice, then top with a quarter of the smoked salmon. Serve immediately.

Ingredients

- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tbsp Dijon mustard
- 1/2 tsp smoked paprika
- 1/2 tsp hot sauce
- 1/2 cup finely chopped cornichons
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 8 hard-boiled eggs, cooled and roughly chopped
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 4 large slices sourdough bread

From collegiate to corporate

Transition. Here are a few tips on making the leap from student to working professional

ASHLEIGH TRAHAN
TalentEgg.ca

Summer is nearly upon us. And while some students are off to work at short-term summer jobs, graduates are facing the end of their academic careers and making the transition into full-time working professionals.

I know from experience that this transition isn't easy. While I was a Type A student in some respects, other behaviours made me less than mentally prepared for a 9 to 5 job. I kept odd hours, furiously writing essays until sunrise, and enjoyed drinking one too many pints on Tuesday nights.

In the interest of saving you some office-related troubles (not to mention a terrible Wednesday morning hangover), here's some advice on how to make the leap from co-ed to corporate life.

It can be tough to reconcile student ways with a rigid schedule. ISTOCK IMAGES

Recall the motivational milestones of student life

As a young professional, I've found I can harness the power of those by-gone academic milestones to grow in my personal and professional life.

- In spring when you'd usually be buckling down for exams, instead get serious about work or personal projects that may have fallen off your radar.
- In the fall, use that autumn motivation to learn new skills by signing up for continuing education courses, or picking up good habits that might have fallen by the wayside in the lazy days of summer.

Invest in an alarm clock

One of the first things you might notice is the never ending exhaustion that comes along with having to wake up at the exact same time, every single day. Not only do you have to wake up, but you are expected to be a productive member of society.

While I can't help you enjoy the early morning wake-up call, the trick to arriving to work on time is a good alarm clock, positioned further than your arm's length away from your bed. It is of critical importance to find the sweet spot where you can hear the alarm, but it's still far enough away from you that you can't hit snooze 15 times.

In all seriousness, it can be tough to reconcile your old student ways with a rigid schedule. If it all becomes too much, schedule time for yourself to enjoy the odd night of regression into student-like fun. "Grown-ups" can enjoy beer pong and pizza every once in a while too.

Remember, you're not being graded on this

In school, there is an intense fear of failure that drives you to achieve perfection (or at least a reasonable grade). Failing a class or test meant that you'd have to repeat your class.

But in the working world, you have to accept that perfection is the enemy of the good, and answers to complex business problems are not as cut and dry as a multiple-choice exam. In fact, failure is one of the best ways to learn. This is not a class where you'll be docked points for the wrong answer, so don't be afraid to pipe up with your ideas, even if you're not sure they'll be a hit.

Embrace uncertainty

When you're caught up in meetings, deadlines or emails, you may have a moment when you realize this is not the swishy, Don Draper-esque job that you envisioned for yourself. It's going to take time to develop your identity in the working world and in your new life as an adult.

Enjoy where you're at, even if your job isn't the life-changing work you imagined whilst reading Sartre in the gentle bosom of academia. Embrace this somewhat confusing period in life as a time for self-discovery. I assure you this will not be your last quarter-life existential crisis.

Making the leap

When the first September rolled around post-university, I have to tell you it was quite the shock. I realized the exciting feeling of that first day back to school, when you're tanned and wearing new school clothes, wasn't coming around again. Making the leap to the professional world can be rough. But when we're challenged to pick up new habits, we can grow by leaps and bounds.

How volunteering can boost your career

As you transition into summer and start looking for work, don't underestimate the power of volunteering and how it can benefit your career.

In Give and Take, author Adam Grant explains how giving can boost your career. He says the most successful givers are those who rate high in concern for others but also in self-interest. Here are some reasons to give:

Work experience

Instead of applying for entry-level jobs that ask for experience you don't have, get it by volunteering — such as what I'm doing in communications at Students Offering Support.

Whether it's working with a new computer program, helping to develop a new website or using a second language, there are specific skills employers look for that you can develop by volunteering — not to mention soft skills such as team work, communication skills and adaptability.

Update your resumé

A sure-fire way to have relevant experience on your resumé is by volunteering in an area where you want to build your career. A survey by TimeBank through Reed Executive found that 73 per cent of employers would recruit a candidate with volunteering experience over one without.

Networking

Volunteering at an organization that does work you want to be involved in is a natural way of networking with the right people. You meet contacts who have contacts, and you never know who might be the contact to lead you to the job you've always wanted.

It could lead to a job

In Give and Take, Grant tells the story of George Meyer, one of the writers for The Simpsons, who many credit as being the creative genius of the show.

Before Meyer got his gig with The Simpsons, he self-published a comedy magazine just to have variety from his other job. It was a hit and made it on Rolling Stone's Hot List of the year's best in entertainment. His magazine got so many submissions that he had to turn some of them down.

The magazine ended up in the hands of The Simpsons' executive director just as the show was getting off the ground and he was looking to hire a writing team. He hired Meyer and some of the contributors to his magazine.

Improve your interviews

If you have recent and relevant career experience, you will feel more confident and have more to talk about in your job interviews. Plus, when you're volunteering with a non-profit organization, you're also working somewhere that actually makes a positive difference in the world, which can't hurt.

Blackhawks tame Wild in overtime

Bryan Bickell scored in overtime on a 2-on-1 rush, and the Chicago Blackhawks started the playoffs on a winning note after dominating the regular season, beating the Minnesota Wild 2-1 on Tuesday night.

Corey Crawford settled down after allowing a weak goal in the opening minutes. Marian Hossa also scored, and the Blackhawks took the early lead in this first-round series.

Game 2 is Friday at the United Center.

Defending champs lose against Blues

Alex Steen stole the puck from goalie Jonathan Quick behind the net and scored a shorthanded goal to give the St. Louis Blues a 2-1 overtime victory over the defending Stanley Cup champion Los Angeles Kings on Tuesday night.

Steen also scored on a power play in the first period for the Blues, who ended an eight-game losing streak against the team that swept them in the second round last spring.

Quick, last year's Conn Smythe winner as playoff MVP, made 35 saves in regulation, keeping the Kings in it for Justin Williams' tying goal with 31.6 seconds left.

ESPN 'regrets' comments made about gay athlete

ESPN says that it regrets the "distraction" caused by one of its reporters who described Jason Collins as a sinner after the NBA centre publicly revealed that he was gay.

Chris Broussard, who covers the NBA for ESPN, had said on the air that Collins and others in the NBA who engage in premarital sex or adultery were "walking in open rebellion to God, and to Jesus Christ." # Bozak won't watch history from sidelines

Leafs vs. Bruins. Linemate Phil Kessel happy to have faceoff pro back in business

Regina native Tyler Bozak isn't interested in watching the Toronto Maple Leafs' first playoff game in nine years from the press box.

The Leafs' No. 1 centre went through a full practice Tuesday and expects to play Wednesday when they visit the Boston Bruins to open their best-of-seven Eastern Conference first-round series.

Bozak missed Toronto's final two regular-season games with an upper-body injury. He skated briefly Monday but left practice early.

Bozak said Tuesday he felt good and desperately wants to be on the ice for the series opener.

"It's really important," he said. "We've come a long way as a team the last couple of years and especially this year.

"We've played pretty good hockey together as a group and it would be tough to sit back and watch the most important time of the year."

Bozak skated Tuesday with regular linemates Phil Kessel and James van Riemsdyk and certainly didn't look out of place. Kessel, who spoke with reporters twice Tuesday after declining to do so Monday, was glad to have his centre back.

"Bozie has been a big part of our team this year," Kessel said.

Having the six-foot-one, 195-pound Bozak in the lineup is a huge boost for Toronto. The 27-year-old Regina native had 12 goals and 16 assists in 46 regular-season games, but was also the club's top faceoff man.

"Bozie is a real smart hockey player. He knows where to be on the ice, the puck kind of follows him around and his game is one where he does a lot of the little things," said Toronto head coach Randy Carlyle. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sens vs. Canadiens. Anderson primed to prove himself

The Ottawa Senators' hopes of defeating the Montreal Canadiens in the first round of the NHL playoffs rest largely on the play of Craig Anderson.

The Senators goaltender was instrumental in getting Ottawa to the post-season. The Sens ranked 27th in the 30-team league in offence, but were second only to Chicago in allowing just 2.08 goals per game.

However, Anderson has yet to win a playoff round in his career. He was impressive in last year's quarter-final series against the New York Rangers, which the Senators lost in Game 7, but he realizes that until he wins a playoff series many will question his ability to win when it counts.

"There's only one team that can move on in each round and so much is determined by how the team plays," Anderson said. "We're at the mercy of our teammates and the better our teammates play the better chances for a goalie to have success and to move on."

Spring into life this season and bid old man winter adieu

Autopilot. Clean out the car, run over the ice scraper, show your support for the Leafs and prepare for the sunshine months

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Feels like spring is finally here.

I realize it may not be spring everywhere, and especially in Southern Manitoba, where they're expecting another snow storm this week, and this just after the week the Winnipeg Jets were officially eliminated from the Stanley Cup Playoffs, but I can only commiserate so much with others. I got to get on with my own life.

Last Saturday was beautiful and warm. I had some errands to run with our Honda Fit. But before I did that I took off the winter tires and replaced them with the summers. Then I was off on my errands, which I could do with the window down and the radio up, something I haven't done since September. It felt pretty good.

It felt so good in fact that I thought of all the other things I should do, automotive wise, now that spring has sprung. Here's my list…

• Take ice scraper out of the car. Lay it on the road. Run over it.

• Replace windshield wiper fluid with summer margarita formula.

• Wash the vehicle with lots of suds, and wearing only leopard print speedo.

• Install new bumper sticker, something like, "Reality is the Only Obstacle to Happiness" or "I Used to Have a Handle on Life, But it Broke" or "Look Busy, Jesus is Coming."

• Make sure horn is working properly and install Toronto Maple Leaf flag on the side glass, to participate fully in mass celebratory parade when Leafs win their first play-off game.

• Rent industrial vacuum used in the mining industry to suck french fries out from their bunker positions deep under the rear seats.

• Make a new CD compilation of driving tunes. On second thought, commandeer our teenagers to do this — they're so much more fluent with the digital formats.

Get out there and enjoy the spring weather while you tackle your own seasonal list. ISTOCK

• Re-visit favourite pot holes before they get covered over and are lost forever. Maybe take pictures and create a collage.

I hope you have your own automotive spring to-do list. It's the most hopeful time of year and a chance for renewal, for both you and your vehicle. Please don't waste the opportunity.

Evantra debuts to dropping jaws

Mazzanti wows Monaco. Orders for the exotic V8 now being taken but bring lots of cash and patience

Italian supercar fans now have one more model to lust over.

Italian coach builder Mazzanti has formally introduced the Evantra V8 at the 2013 Top Marques Monaco show, having released CAD renderings of the supercar at the end of last year.

Jaws dropped as the vehicle was revealed and it's no surprise as only five individually personalized units will be handmade in Italy each year, with the bespoke supercar powered by a Corvette-sourced V8 engine capable of blasting out 701hp.

The naturally aspirated engine can propel the Evantra from 0-62 mph in just 3.2 seconds, and thanks to a super strong carbon fibre body, total weight for the Mazzanti Evantra is a paltry 2,866 pounds.

Power from the mid-mounted Corvette engine — which boasts titanium valves and connecting rods — is sent to the rear wheels via a paddle-shifted six-speed sequential transmission.

F1 and Le Mans consultant Ysim helped to fine-tune the car's design for optimal aerodynamic efficiency, while highlights of the chassis include 20-inch OZ alloys, Brembo brakes (with optional carbon-ceramics), and electronic adjustment of the engine and transmission ranging from Strada to Corsa.

There are also two body choices: Pro-Body is made of carbon-fibre composite, and the One-Body is made of aluminum, which can be personalized to customer's exact specifications resulting in a one-off finish.

The interior is swathed in leather prepared with a special aniline treatment, and can be customized with a range of options including exotic leather and precious materials.

The centre console sports data acquisition system from AIM and a Bosch audio-navigation system, while the Tricolore engine start button can be found on the headliner and the Nardi steering wheel contains a small display indicating the current gear.

MKS offers affordable auto luxury

Lincoln MKS

The Lincoln MKS's job was to bring Ford's presence into the luxury car scene, challenging luxury and entry-luxury models like the Volkswagen Passat, Chrysler 300, Acura TL, BMW 5-Series and Audi A6.

Big, handsome and generously proportioned, the MKS packed plenty of space for a four or five-person road trip. Technology abounded — and features like voice-command, navigation, full Bluetooth connectivity and an advanced parking system were all available. Climate controlled leather memory seats, a THX audio system and multi-zone climate control added to its promise of affordable high-class luxury.

Common Issues

Once you've confirmed proper operation of all interior electronics, pay special attention to the audio system. Ensure the THX unit plays back music from all sources clearly — and without popping or hissing. If that's not the case, a Technical Service Bulletin may help solve the issue. Cycle the climate control system through its various settings as well, noting any unusual clicking or popping noises and checking for proper operation. A "door blend actuator," which opens and closes flaps within the climate control system, could cause these problems if it goes bad. Ensure the transmission shifts smoothly and eagerly up and down through the gears. Hard shifting, a feeling of being "stuck" in a certain gear, or a "clunking" sensation could indicate a problem with the transmission or its control module. On models with all wheel drive (AWD), have a part called the Power Take Off (PTU) unit checked for signs of leakage by a Ford or Lincoln mechanic.

Engine

Look for V6 power all around — namely from a naturally-aspirated 3.7 litre unit with 273 horsepower, or a twin-turbocharged "EcoBoost" 3.5 litre V6 with 355. All models got an automatic transmission. Front-drive was standard and AWD was available, though standard on EcoBoost powered models.

What owners like

Power output, space, comfort and interior quality were all highly rated by MKS owners. A commanding driving position is also favoured. Overall, this appears to be a car loved for delivering affordable access to the motoring high-life.

What owners dislike

Some owners wanted better mileage and a firmer, sportier ride.

Verdict

In the used market, MKS will be tough to beat where overall size, performance, comfort and feature content is concerned. A non-turbocharged, front-drive model will be the cheapest to insure, fuel and maintain.

Your vehicle needs some spring cleaning too

Windscreen and tires.
Ensure your vision is clear, check your tire threads and change your car's shoes in time for summer

Spring cleaning is on most people's minds as the weather heats up. When making a spring cleaning checklist, don't forget to include your vehicle.

Properly maintaining your vehicle is essential to increasing its average life expectancy.

To help keep it running on all cylinders, follow this simple checklist to make sure you stay off the side of the road:

Check your vision
About 90 per cent of all driving decisions are made based upon vision. Consider your options when maintaining your wiper blades. You may be able to clean them with rubbing alcohol; replace them if they are cracked, torn, cut or streaking.

Check your owner's manual for specifics
Different cars have different sizes.

Check the wear pattern of your tires
If you notice certain parts are becoming more worn than others, take a look at some of the possible causes:
Wear on inside and outside edges means under-inflation, wear in centre means over-inflation. Cups or dips in the tread means worn suspension parts. Sawtooth edges means misalignment.

Change your car's shoes
Now is the time to change tires from winter to summer or all-season, if you haven't already. And for those in need of new tires for their vehicle, each tire in the Goodyear Assurance family meets the needs of drivers by offering confident all-season traction plus a relevant benefit that enhances the driving experience. This product lineup includes Assurance ComforTred Touring with refined handling and comfort, Assurance TripleTred All-Season with ultra-traction, and Assurance Fuel Max with fuel efficiency.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You don't have to feel sorry for someone if you think they don't deserve it. Be true to yourself and be honest about your feelings. There are many injustices in the world but few if any of them are your fault.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Mars in your birth sign endows you with self-confidence but with Saturn also in the picture, be cautious. Whatever you choose to do, it will have repercussions.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
It may seem to other people that you are easily manipulated but it isn't the truth — and it gives you an advantage. Let your rivals think you are weak then, when they are least expecting it, you can hit back.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Decide what it is you want to do, then look for ways to pay for it. If you are thinking about changing what you do for a living, put job satisfaction at the top of your list.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You may feel you got less than you deserve from some kind of service but don't make a fuss about it. You will soon get a chance to improve your status. You are in fact in quite a strong bargaining position.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You won't lack for enthusiasm today but what about common sense? Virgos like to think things through carefully but Mars may encourage you to take risks. In a word: don't.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
If there is something you want, you will find a way to get it no matter what obstacles are in your path. Once you possess it, you may find it isn't that great after all but it's the challenge that excites you.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Don't bother trying to explain your actions to people because they won't understand. Just do what you have to do and ignore whatever criticism may come your way. What do you care what other people think?

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be laid back but some people can be fussy and no doubt certain individuals will have a good moan today. Find ways to blot them out of your consciousness.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
It all seems to be coming together now. What could go wrong? Quite a lot actually. With Mars opposing your ruler Saturn today, you need to keep your wits about you. Who do you trust? Only yourself.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Be honest about your feelings today and make sure everyone else is honest about theirs too. Some of things you hear won't be pretty but it will be better if everything is out in the open.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you must get involved in a dispute, make sure you keep your head. The planets are stirring things up a bit and there will be disagreements.
